SALESMAN UNWITTINGLY
AIDED BANDIT TO ESCAPE
STATE POLICE

ROMAN PURCHASES MACHINE

Capital City Salesman Sells Car to Dillinger's Moll; Also Buys
License Plates

INDIANAPOLIS, April 10 (UP)— Ann Martin, attractive paramour of John Dillinger, was identified today as the woman who purchased an automobile here in which the desperado escaped to Pennsylvania.
An Indianapolis woman known to have connections with the Dillinger gang accompanied Miss Martin to the Hatfield Ford agency when the car was purchased, it was learned.
Miss Martin was identified from a photograph as the woman who paid $750 in $10 bills for the automobile.
Miss Martin was with Dillinger when he and three members of his gang were captured at Tucson, Ariz., last January.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 10 (UP)—
An Indianapolis automobile salesman is believed today to have unwittingly aided John Dillinger to escape from close police pursuit here over the weekend.

The salesman sold a new car to a man giving her name as Mrs. Fred Hatfield and purchased license plates for her at a downtown branch.
This car, according to United Press reports from Pittsburgh, was recently sighted in East Liberty, Pa., last night, containing John Dillinger, his henchman, John Hamilton, and a woman.

The salesman purchasing the car and license, a woman gave her address as 409 LaSalle St., Indianapolis.
This house is occupied by Fred Hatfield, nephew of Dillinger and assistant at a nearby gasoline station.

When questioned today Mrs. Hancock said she and her husband did not know a Mrs. Penfield and disclaimed knowledge of the purchase of the new car.

Mrs. Hancock said she and her husband have not seen their outlaw relative since last December.

Police were inclined to believe the car had been purchased by Pearl Hatfield, Kokomo, sought as a Dillinger henchman.

Mrs. Elliott has been reported seen recently in Indianapolis during the last few days.

A Pittsburgh report that Dil-linger is driving a new automobile based in Indianapolis was further substantiated by other recent developments in the hunt for the famous desperado.

A large sedan wrecked in an auto crash on state highway 31, north of Pittsburgh, has been identified recently by federal agents as one driven by St. Paul, Minn., by the desperado after he escaped from a prison there March 31.

The wrecked automobile, from which the license plates and other items of identification had been removed, was abandoned by the two after the accident. Two submachine gun clips were found in the rear seat.

Four federal agents who came here in search of Dillinger after the wrecked car was found, were aided by police in raids on two west end homes Sunday but no trace of the desperado was found.

At the homes raided were those of Dillinger, half brother of the desperado, and Mrs. Mary Kinder, heart of Harry Pierpont, Dil-linger's gang member.

PRIMARY IS HELD TODAY IN ILLINOIS

PUBLIC REACTION TO NEW DEAL FACES FIRST TEST
IN MIDWEST

FRAUD; VIOLENCE CHARGED

Voters to Nominate Candidates For More than 900 County, State and National Offices

CHICAGO, April 10, (UP)—New deals, state and national, faced their initial test of public reaction on a large scale today as voters of Illinois participated in the first statewide primary election since the 1932 Democratic landslide.

The usual pre-election alarms arose over one slaying of a political worker and an alleged expose of fraudulent registrations.

Basically the primary is for the purpose of nominating Democratic and Republican candidates for more than 900 county, state and national offices and of electing personnel of state and county party organizations, but it also will test reaction to new deals in candidacies of sitting Democratic and Republican congressmen and state legislators.

A further test involving new deals will be in the voting strength of the two parties, the Democrats seeking to roll up a primary total which will surpass their previous high of 1932 as a complimentary gesture to the White House, and the Republicans striving to maintain their position as the state's major party.

Goal of the Democrats is a million votes, but leaders say they will be satisfied if they can pass the 1932 mark of 800,000 which more than doubled their vote in any other primary. Republicans hope to trim the Democratic primary vote and register a gain over their 1932 primary figure of approximately 1,300,000.

Candidacies of 12 sitting Democratic congressmen facing opposition for nomination are expected to supply the answer as to what the mass of Democratic voters think of the Rooseveltian new deal.

Among the 12 is Speaker Henry T.
Rainey, running in the 20th central Illinois agricultural district which he has represented in the lower house of congress all but two of the last 32 years. Rainey is opposed by J. H.
Kirby, Petersburg farmer and former state legislator. His defeat would be considered an upset.

All of the other 11 are favored for renomination because of organization support or because their opposition is divided into two or more camps. Six sitting Democrats are unopposed.

Offices for which candidates were nominated today were for 27 congressional seats—two of them state at large—a complete new state house of representatives, state senators in 26 odd numbered districts and one in an even numbered district where there is a vacancy, state treasurer, state superintendent of public instruction, and seven important county posts in each of the state's 102 counties.

was arrested on an affidavit charging him with assault and battery on Harvey Ferrand of Putnamville, will be plea before Judge Wilbur S. Donner in circuit court Monday afternoon.

Jones is alleged to have assaulted Ferrand in an altercation at the Fer-rand home when he went there to see his former wife, a daughter of Fer-rand.

Jones was said to have denied the assault Monday afternoon, insisting that members of the Ferrand family had been the aggressors. He insisted on being tried on the charge.

Expedition Seeking Source of Solomon's Wealth

Seeking the fabulous Lost Land of Ophir, whence King Solomon is believed to have derived the great wealth that made him "exceed all the kings of the earth for riches," Count Byron de Proctor, U. S. explorer, and a party of scientists are braving the wilds of Abyssinia in the unexplored region between Lake Tsana and the Blue Nile. The base of operations is Addis Ababa, capital of Abyssinia and seat of Emperor Haile Selassie, Lion of Judah, who claims direct descent from Menelik, son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. The expedition expects to find valuable data of early Nile civilizations and traces of pre-historic man in the spot that many scientists contend is the cradle of the human race.

Sinister French Slayer Beheaded

MODERN "BLUEBEARD" EX-ECUTED FOLLOWING REPAIR OF GUILLOTINE

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, FRANCE, April 10 (UP)—A horrid crowd of curiosity seekers today saw a guillotine jam while George Sarret, sinister mass murderer, was being executed at dawn.

Men and women in the public square, heard Sarret protest angrily:
"Be quick. Get it over with."

It was 10 minutes before the guillotine could be repaired. Then Sarret was beheaded.

Sarret's crimes caused more horror than any since those of "Bluebeard" Landru, who married dozens of women, and murdered them.

The latest mass murderer specializing in insurance policies. He insured selected victims, murdered them and collected. It was alleged that Sarret had obtained more than 2,000,000 francs ($132,000) from insurance companies.

Changes in the Butler University coaching staff resulting in the out-ball coach, and turning over the grid work to athletic director Paul Hinkle today.

Lack of finances and the poor showing of Butler teams under Mackey's leadership during the past two seasons gave rise to the reports that the former Ohio Wesleyan mentor would be released soon.

WIRT LISTS SEVEN NAMES AT HEARING

SAYS SOVIET NEWS AGENT TERMED ROOSEVELT AS
NEW "KERENSKY"

THREE WOMEN IN GROUP

Three Other Lesser Brain Trusters Named in Addition to Women in Red Probe

WASHINGTON, April 10, (UP)—
Dr. William A. Wirt today named Lawrence Todd of the Soviet Tass News agency as the person who referred to President Roosevelt as the "Kerensky of this revolution."

Todd has no connection with the brain trust or the federal government. He was correspondent here for the Federated Press, organized labor publication, before joining the Tass agency. He is an American citizen, and is a descendant of a soldier who fought in the American revolution.

The Todd revelation came immediately after Wirt had named six lesser brain trusters—three of them women—as present at a party last September at which the revolution charges were brought out.

Resignation of Todd appeared to bring the Wirt red scare to an anti-climax after an hour and 25 minutes of testimony by the Indiana educator.

The red hunt was started by a statement contained in an article written by Wirt that one of the Roosevelt brain trust compared the president to Kerensky, who was the forerunner of the communist revolution which has led Soviet Russia to Stalin.

Wirt, appearing before a house investigating committee, said the remark was made at a dinner near Washington last September.

A group of the "satellites" of the brain trust were present, he said.
He named Mary Taylor, economist of the AAA, and Hildegard Kneel-and, of the agriculture department, as "accompanying" to Todd's remark about "Kerensky."

"The diners said not only Roosevelt but all of us were in the middle of the stream," said Wirt.

Todd was then named by Wirt as the diner who referred to the president as the "Kerensky of the revolution."

The "Kerensky" charge was contained in the manuscript Wirt indicated that the reference was made by a member of the brain trust.

Wirt said he had another meeting on Sept. 1, at which M. L. Wilson, a director of the federal government's subsistence homestead work, and Dr.
Robert Kohn were present. He said both were "brain trusters."

He followed that with the charge the Speaker Henry T. Rainey had said "government will take over industry and then I don't know what will happen."

ago.

pected to bring in additional names which may swell the total to 13,000 or more.

CHICKENS ARE STOLEN
James F. O'Hair, living seven miles north of Greencastle on state road 43, reported Tuesday that thieves had stolen twenty-seven chickens from a poultry house on his farm Monday night. The stolen poultry included twenty-six hens and one rooster of the Rhode Island and Plymouth Rock strains.

Discovery of the robbery was made when the O'Hair housekeeper went to feed the poultry Tuesday morning and could find but four hens and one rooster of the original flock. Mrs. Harvey O'Hair, a neighbor, reported she had heard a car stop between 1 and 2 o'clock Tuesday morning and it was believed the theft occurred at this time.

AGED MAN WEAVES RUGS

KAUKAUNA, Wis. (UP)—Dr. Richard Kerr, 88, retired veterinarian, has a strange hobby. Several years ago when his age compelled him to forsake an active life he took up rug weaving. Her regular procedure is to lay two large eggs in as many days, take a day off for rest, then come back into production for two more days.

Figures in American Legion Lobby Furor

The recent veterans veto landslide which marked President Roosevelt's first major defeat since his inauguration and brought a storm of protest, led by Dr. W. Russell Bowie, of Grace Church, New York, from 51 pulpits throughout the nation, focuses the national spotlight upon Colonel John T. Taylor, of the American Legion Legislative Council, who, more than any other man is credited with the great Legion victory. Colonel Taylor, a veteran of the world war, in which he won 13 decorations, is regarded as the most effective lobbyist on Capitol Hill since the days of Wayne B. Wheeler and his dry cohorts. He played a prominent part in founding the Legion in 1919 and has been its foremost champion at the capital ever since. The Right Rev. Ernest Milmore Stires, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Long Island, is one of the noted ecclesiasts who denounced Legion lobbying.

MYSTERY of MR. X

Adapted from the novel by PHILIP MACDONALD
Metro-Goldwyn Pictures

CHAPTER II THE BORROWED HELMET

The tiny ray of light playing upon the door of the safe in the Drayton library in fashionable Berners Square, came from a tiny bulb in the centre of a white carnation which the man kneeling before the safe wore in the lapel of the overcoat which nearly but not quite concealed the fact that he was in evening dress. His nimble fingers played quickly with the combination as his ears listened intently to the fall of the tumbler of the lock. The safe door swung open revealing the inside almost bare of contents. On one shelf reposed a small Morocco case. The man's hand went directly to it and withdrew it, closing the safe door. He opened the box, a huge diamond sparkled in the tiny ray of light from the carnation.

He was still admiring the precious stone when a noise attracted his attention. After listening intently a moment, he put the stone in his pocket, extinguished the button-hole flashlight, crossed the library to the window where he stopped to listen and to pull socks over his shoes to deaden all sound as he climbed down to the ground. Once outside, he hurried along towards a gate, but came to an abrupt halt before he reached it, and stared, motionless, down at the dead body of a Constable sprawled on the ground. He was in the act of stooping to inspect the body of this undoubtedly new victim of "X", when he changed his mind, and hastened out to the pavement and onto a corner of Berners Square where a taxi stood waiting.

"Engaged?" asked the man in evening dress. "No, sir. Where to, sir?" The fare got into the cab. "Get away—quick!"

After they had gone several blocks, the taxi-man said, over his shoulder: "Get the diamond, Mr. Revel!" "I got what I went for, Palmer. Step on it." The taxi gathered speed.

It was the next morning in Nicholas Revel's flat. Palmer sat at the large writing table, the morning newspapers spread out in front of him, a look of blended fear and disappointment on his face. Revel entered from the bedroom, buttoning his waistcoat.

Marche reached out and snatched the chinstrap of Beecham's helmet.

"And listen 'ere, wot it says at the end," said Palmer: "And now Scotland Yard, for the first time, has a clue to the killer. The word is out to all men on the case—"

Revel interrupted: "I've already read it. 'Find the man who stole the Drayton diamond and you have Mr. X.'"

"But don't you see," cried Palmer, trying vainly to hide his panic. "That means you! And me! 'Uch! Chuck the bloomin' thing in the river I tell yer! It's too 'ot!'"

"Joseph!" cried Revel in mock surprise. "You don't mean to tell me you've got cold feet!"

"If I was to put 'em on a 'ot tub right now, yed 'ave ice water—like that," he snapped, his fingers. "Wot do you wanna 'old it for, Nicholas?"

"For money. So I can go places and see things."

"But I ask yer, if they 'ang yer up by the neck where can you go and wot can you see?"

Revel unscrewed the top of a table lamp and from the hollow beneath drew out the Drayton diamond and held it in his palm so Palmer could see its sparkle.

"The insurance company would pay five thousand pounds for its return. And you'd throw that away?"

"And ruddy quick too. 'Ere, 'ide the bloomin' thing afore some-one—"

He started up in sudden panic as the doorbell rang. "Strike me pink!" he cried, staring in horror at the door. Revel slipped the diamond back into its hiding place, put back the top of the lamp, and went to the door which he opened.

"You should do something for your nerves, Palmer. It's only Mr. Hutchinson."

Hutchinson was a pale young man in his middle twenties. He entered furtively. "They're acting very queer at the head office," he murmured excitedly to Revel.

"Suspicious?"

"Looks like it. None of us clerks is allowed to consult the list of insured jewels any more."

"They were bound to suspect a leak sometime. Lucky we got the Drayton diamond before they closed down on you. How much are they offering now?"

"Lady Drayton telephoned Gaynor

Prepared for Big Naval Review in New York

For the first time since the review of the "Victory Fleet" in December, 1918, the combined battle and scouting forces of the United States Navy will fire their 21-gun Presidential salute at New York early in May as they are reviewed by President Roosevelt. On April 9, the combined fleets will leave their base on the West Coast for the voyage to New York. Admiral David Foote Sellers (left), Commander-in-Chief of the United States fleet, will lead the armada of 98 ships in his flagship, U. S. S. Pennsylvania. Vice Admiral Frank R. Brumby will lead the scouting force. The big review and maneuvers are being held in Atlantic waters this year as a friendly gesture towards Japan, the presence of the fleet in the Pacific having long been a sore spot with Nippon.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Thunder, such as has not been heard on the Atlantic seaboard since December, 1918, is due to make the canyons of Manhattan resound early in May. It will begin when the ninety-eight warships that comprise the combined battle and scouting forces of the United States navy roar out a 21 gun Presidential salute as they pass in majestic review before their commander-in-chief at Ambrose lightship, at the entrance to New York harbor.

It will be a great moment for Franklin D. Roosevelt. His mind will go back on wings of memory to that day in December, 16 years ago, when, in a secondary position to his superior, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, he stood aboard the presidential yacht, Mayflower, and welcomed the "Victory Fleet" back from the wars.

Although the fleet fires its 21 gun Presidential salute at that occasion, President Wilson was not there to hear it. Even as the guns were booming, Wilson was being received by King George at Buckingham Palace in London.

The fleet has been reviewed many times since that day. President Wilson reviewed the Pacific fleet at Seattle in 1919. President Harding inspected the Atlantic fleet at Hampton Roads, Va., in 1921. President Coolidge reviewed the combined fleets at Hampton Roads in 1927 and President Hoover performed a similar ceremony in 1930. But Roosevelt, New York, and the fleet are linked only to that cold December day in 1918.

The battle and scouting forces are scheduled to leave their base on the West Coast on April 9. Approximately 41,000 officers and men will make the trip. Admiral David Foote Sellers, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, will lead the van of the mighty armada aboard his flagship, the U. S. S. Pennsylvania. Vice-Admiral Frank R. Brumby, in his flagship, the Indianapolis, will lead the scouting forces.

It is estimated that the cost of fuel to bring the combined fleets to New York will reach almost $2,000,000.

Enroute the gray battle-wagons will be polished, shined and oiled so that the best traditions of the navy shall be upheld when the armada steams past the big chief. There will be joy aboard every ship for there is hardly a single craft in the mighty fleet which has not its quota of blue-jackets whose homes are in the east and who have not seen those homes for many months—years in some cases.

Naval authorities list five reasons for holding the big review and maneuvers in Atlantic waters this year.

First, a friendly gesture towards Japan by removing the fleet from the Pacific. Its presence there long has been a sore point in U. S.-Japanese relations.

Incidentally, Hiroshi Saito, Japanese ambassador to the United States, is expected to be a guest of President Roosevelt on the reviewing craft during the "big parade."

Second, to satisfy complaints of Eastern ports after the transfer of the scouting fleet to the West Coast in 1932. Business invariably booms wherever the fleet happens to drop anchor and slumps when the fleet sings "Anchors Aweigh."

Third, to co-ordinate maneuvers between scouting and battle fleets.

Fourth, to provide practical training for the personnel and to familiarize it with the problems of Atlantic and Pacific areas.

Fifth, to spread the spending for the personnel and to familiarize money of sailors between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

The naval authorities might have added a sixth—to give the eastern girls a "break."

Following the review sections of the fleet will visit eastern ports before going to base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, which will be the center of operations for maneuvers to be held in September.
